A moose barely avoided slamming into traffic while crossing a road that passes through a park in northeast Moscow earlier this week.

Footage of the incident shot on a dashboard camera of a passing car shows the moose appear suddenly out of the woods in Sokolniki park on Monday morning, running full speed onto the road.

As it approaches and almost runs into a passing car, it pulls up quickly, then sprints past as the car moves ahead of it.

The car with the camera shooting the scene has to brake for a moment to let it go past, into the forest on the other side of the road.
