

U.S. Journal Compares Putin With Hairless Cats

By The Moscow Times

April 30, 2013

14 Hairless Cats That Look Like Vladimir Putin

I Can Has Vladimir?

BY ELIZABETH F. RALPH | APRIL 29, 2013

In the spirit of Ben Smith's "11 BuzzFeed Lists That Explain the World" for the May/June 2013 issue of Foreign Policy, the FP staff decided to look at the world through BuzzFeed's eyes for a day. For more, check out 7 Things North Korea Is Really Good At, 9 Disturbingly Good Jihadi Raps, 36 Mustaches That Explain Why There's No Peace in the Middle East, and 1 Pentagon Weapons System That Was on Time and Under Budget.

 15,915 people like this. Be the first of your friends.

1.

14 Hairless Cats That Look Like Vladimir Putin - By Elizabeth F. Ralph
14,499 people recommended this.

What China and Russia Don't Get About Soft Power - By Joseph S. Nye
1,084 people recommended this.

Sink or Swim - By Nicholas Kravov
705 people recommended this.

Facebook social plugin

Most Popular on FP

- 7 Things North Korea Is Really Good At
- 14 Hairless Cats That Look Like Vladimir Putin
- What China and Russia Don't Get About Soft Power
- The End of the Gandhis
- The Driver
- The FP Power Map
- Minister No
- 8 Myths About India's Growth
- The Balance of Power

TODAY'S FP COVER

A screen grab of the Putin-cat photo collection from Foreign Policy's website.

The influential U.S. journal Foreign Policy has set tongues wagging with a photo gallery in its May/June issue titled, "14 Hairless Cats That Look Like Vladimir Putin."

The magazine admits that the collection of pictures is a tongue-in-cheek nod to the changing tastes of readers who might prefer to get their news from sources like Ben Smith's "11 BuzzFeed Lists That Explain the World."

"The FP staff decided to look at the world through BuzzFeed's eyes for a day," says a short article accompanying the 14 photos of Putin and the hairless cats.

The pictures include cats posing in bow ties, sunglasses and a fur coat beside photos of Putin wearing similar apparel.

Readers offered mix reviews of the effort, with some saying Foreign Policy had sunk to a low and shouldn't compare a man with an animal.

"Foreign Policy: You really lost my respect as "reasonable critical magazine," wrote one reader.

But others suggested that those who took offense should lighten up.

"I feel bad for all the people who cannot accept some humor in a respected publication once in a while," a reader wrote.

Photo collections of Putin are popular online and perhaps have been encouraged by Putin himself, who has posed barechested in Siberia, diving in the Black Sea and, most recently, romping with his dogs in the snow in March.

Foreign Policy's Putin photo collection was the most popular page on its website late Monday, but by Tuesday morning it had been passed by another BuzzFeed-style collection: "7 Things North Korea Is Really Good At."

Related articles:

- A Fairy Tale Setting for Clay Characters
- 'Devochki Iz Kalendarya' Meet the Calendar Girls
- Football-Star Husband Backs Mrs. Russia's Decision to Quit

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2013/04/30/us-journal-compares-putin-with-hairless-cats-a23722>