June 30, 2015

Crowds celebrating at a Fruit Vibrations concert, just one event in Moscow's July concert and festival scene.

Once upon a time, cultural life in Moscow died in the summer. Lucky souls with dachas spent long weekends out of the city, digging in the garden, grilling shashlyk and cooling off in the local swimming hole. Even luckier souls went south with the kids and grandparents. Theaters closed their doors. Dance and opera troupes left for tours abroad. Culture dozed.

Not anymore. July is packed with music festivals and events for every taste and budget — even for those with no entertainment budget at all.

Nashestviye 2015

With the participation of groups like Aria, B-2, Spleen, Brainstorm, and many others, Russia's main rock 'n' roll forum looks set to rock the country for the 15th year in a row.

When: July 3-6, 10 a.m.

Where: Bolshoye Zavidovo, Tver region.

How much: 1,800-22,000 rubles ($32-394)

Contact: nashestvie.ru; nashestvie_torg@mail.ru

Back to the '60s

If you have a longing for pouffy hair, tight jeans and early rock 'n' roll, this is the festival for you. The group Bravo will provide the music, and you can buy vintage duds at the door.

When: July 4, noon

Where: Krasnaya Presnya park, 5 Mantulinskaya Ulitsa. Metro Vystavochnaya.

How much: 1,500-2,000 rubles ($27-36)

Placebo

Heavy and melancholy, Placebo brings its punky, gothy, glammy show to Moscow, still led by charismatic lead singer Brian Molko, with his indescribable and absolutely unique voice.

When: July 4, 8 p.m.

Where: Green Theater, Gorky Park, 9 Krymsky Val. Metro Park Kultury.

How much: 2,500-3,500 rubles ($45-63)

Contact: 495-236-2716

Heiko Laschitzki

London's popular Placebo band brings their music to Gorky Park in July.

Ildar Sh

Ildar Sh plays music on the hang drums, producing a seductive sound that is exotic to the Russian ear. He brings his unexpected and dreamy combination of voices, instruments and music to Moscow.

When: July 5, 4 p.m.

Where: Artplay Design Center, 10 Nizhnyaya Syromyatnicheskaya Ulitsa. Metro Kurskaya, Chkalovskaya.

How much: free

Outline Moscow

A weekend of what the organizers call "advanced music and art": Live concerts, health food market, installations, art objects, art forums, games and entertainment.

When: July 4-5, noon

Where: Karacharovsky Mechanical Factory, 93 Novokhokhlovskaya Ulitsa. Metro Volgogradsky Prospekt.

How much: 1,000 rubles ($18)

Contact: 905-717-1715

Kuryokhin and Aigi

An evening in memory of avant-garde composer Sergei Kuryokhin (1954-1996), featuring Alexei Aigi and 4'33'', the Ad Libitum Orchestra, Sergei Letov (saxophone), Vyacheslav Gaivoronsky (trumpet), Vladimir Volkov (double bass), Yekaterina Kichigina (soprano) and others.

When: July 9, 8 p.m.

Where: Moscow Conservatory Great Hall, 13 Bolshaya Nikitskaya Ulitsa. Metro Pushkinskaya, Biblioteka Imeni Lenina.

How much: 2,000-4,000 rubles ($36-72)

Yann Tiersen will play YotaSpace.

A French genius, beloved by Russians, whose musical career has spanned almost 20 years, multi-instrumentalist Yann Tiersen's style is a delightfully unique mix of classical minimalism, post-rock, folktronica and indie rock. Best known for composing the soundtrack to the acclaimed French film "Amelie," Tiersen will present his latest album Infinity.

When: July 19, 8 p.m.

Where: YotaSpace, 11 Ulitsa Ordzhonikidze. Metro Leninsky Prospekt.

How much: 2,000-5,000 rubles ($36-90)

Afisha Picnic

Each year, Moscow's most famous picnic is visited by about 50,000 people from all over the country and neighboring countries. The 12-hour marathon at the Kolomenskoye outdoor museum has not just music of all styles, but also a full array of entertainment, from movies to performances — and a legendary food court.

When: July 25, noon

Where: Kolomenskoye, 39 Prospekt Andropova. Metro Kolomenskaya, Kashirskaya.

How much: 2,200 rubles ($45)
