Beer Happens

Nearly 500 types of beer and classy food

Beer Happens is another proud addition to the rapidly expanding craft beer scene in Moscow. With more than 400 different bottled beers and over 20 on draught, there is no way that you will leave this place thirsty. Or hungry. Don't look for pub grub: there isn't a burger or fries in sight. Enjoy, say, a salad of roasted beets with duck breast and oyster mushrooms, or glazed beef cheeks with a celery root and gingered pear puree.

Skuratov Coffee

Skuratov Coffee

True fresh roasted coffee

Skuratov Coffee, which started as a roasting company, has recently opened a hip new coffee shop on Kalashny Pereulok — think exposed brick, lots of wood, and paper cups and bags. They consider themselves coffee specialists and guarantee that your coffee has been freshly roasted no later than one day before. Tea is also produced from fresh ingredients in-house. It's all coffee and tea, so grab a coffee and run.

Moscow's pop-up kebab magicians settle down

Three years after their updated Amsterdam-style kebabs took Moscow's street food scene by storm, the owners of Durum-Durum are swapping their signature pop-up trucks for a decidedly stationary cafe at Baumanskaya. They have, however, kept all their specialties — from chicken and lamb wraps to a sweet "fruit durum." .
