Viennese bakery on Moscow's Golden Mile

Engelpekar is a new Viennese bakery on Ostozhenka, Moscow's Golden Mile. The flour is imported from Austria, you are greeted by a busty blond in a traditional outfit, and Austrian tunes blare from the radio. It's mostly take-out. The sandwiches are great, especially the mozzarella and tomato (259 rubles) or ham and cheese (249 rubles). Try the sweet cheese pastry (209 rubles) with Viennese melange coffee (239 rubles).

Lucky Burger

Lucky Burger

Best burger joint for the money

All burgers at Lucky Burger are served on brioche buns with a special twist. For example, the Terminator has slices of ginger, and the lamb burger has sulguni cheese and coriander. Also on offer are chicken wings, coleslaw and corn on the cob. Try the Terminator and a drink made from sea buckthorn or blackcurrant. For pescatarians, the Fishman burger is a great alternative.

Offshore Bar

Offshore Bar

A drink with a view

Located on an island, Offshore Bar has a room with a large screen for movie nights and other events and a second, quieter room. The food is decent; try the artichoke and tuna salad (510 rubles) or rice with Kung Pao chicken (390 rubles). But cocktails are this place's specialty. We recommend Tailored or Pink Panther (both 490 rubles). Snag a table by the window and enjoy the view.

Scrocchiarella

A taste of Rome

Scrocchiarella specializes in authentic Italian pizzas, traditionally baked on a wooden board in a stone pizza oven. This place keeps it simple: an open kitchen looks out over wooden benches, dangling ceiling lamps and plenty of exposed brick. You can opt for a slice, a medium or a Goliath 80-centimeter pizza to fight over with friends and family. Soups and pasta are also available.
