ART.WHO.ART

Contemporary art covered

This weekend the 6th ART.WHO.ART youth festival kicks off at Flacon Design Factory. The three day event showcases the best upcoming music, art and creativity in the capital. Alongside an exhibition of paintings and photographs from previous participants in the ART.WHO.ART program an educational program will be hosted over the course of the weekend. Speakers include media expert Lev Manovich and artist Vadim Epstein. Sunday is dedicated to avant-garde art with masterclasses, themed lectures and screenings from graduates of the Moscow School of Film.

Film Night

An evening at the movies

On Saturday movie theaters across the city will be packed out as Moscow celebrates film night. The event, part of the 2016 Year of Russian Cinema, will take place in 14 of the city's parks. From a sing-along musical screening of “Mary Poppins” at Gorky park to “Good Boy” directed by Oksana Karas, there'll be something for every age and taste. Film screenings will be accompanied by talks from world-renowned directors and film industry professionals. Some of the events need to be registered for in advance.

Viva Latino

A celebration of Latin culture

Celebrate the last weekend of the summer with the hottest festival in town, Viva Latino. Over the course of the festival Kuzminsky park will become a riot of bright colors, fiery rhythms and delicious food. Guests can learn Latin American dances, learn traditional South and Central American games and take part in a number of child-friendly masterclasses. Not to mention the concert program featuring singers and dancers from Mexico, Argentina and Cuba. As for the food, think burritos, salsa and more guacamole than you can scoop onto your tortilla chip.
