

Triple Sunrise Dazzles Northern Russia, in Pictures

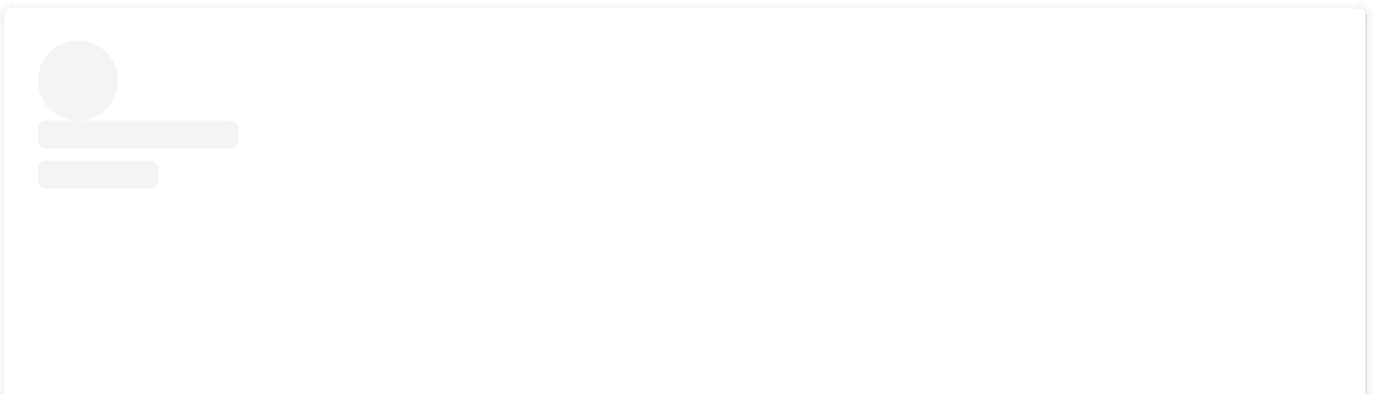

February 13, 2019

meteora_ksu / Instagram

Early risers in the Yamal-Nenets autonomous district were treated to an enchanting illusion of three glowing suns on Wednesday morning.

Embed:

Посмотреть эту публикацию в Instagram

Публикация от Мобильный Репортёр Ноябрьск 🇷🇺 (@reporter_noyabrsk) 12 Фев 2019 в 9:44 PST

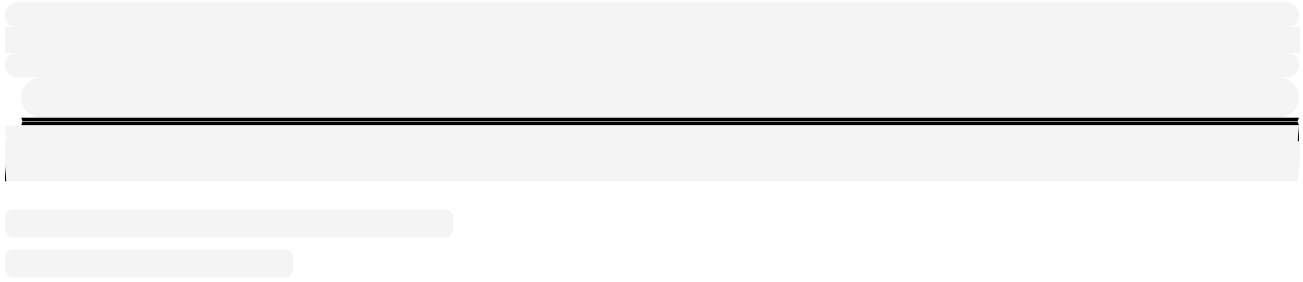

The phenomenon is caused by tiny ice crystals refracting the light into the sky.

Embed:

Посмотреть эту публикацию в Instagram

Публикация от Виктор А. (@viktor.chuk) 12 Фев 2019 в 6:14 PST

Local residents captured the optical illusion — also known as sundog and parhelion — and shared it on Instagram.

Embed:

Посмотреть эту публикацию в Instagram

Публикация от Ksenia Olegovna (@meteora_ksu) 12 Фев 2019 в 4:36 PST

But while social media users were left in awe of the three celestial bodies, local residents took the trick of the light in their stride.

Embed:

Посмотреть эту публикацию в Instagram

Публикация от Варвара Кулик (@varvarakulik7370) 11 Фев 2019 в 11:57 PST

“I can’t say it’s rare in the district,” Artyom Koshkin, the head of the regional weather service, told the state-run RIA Novosti news agency on Wednesday.

Embed:

Посмотреть эту публикацию в Instagram

Публикация от Рассourcir (@samoylov_afanasy) 11 Фев 2019 в 5:14 PST

The effects of the refracted light make for pleasant driving.

Embed:

Посмотреть эту публикацию в Instagram

Публикация от Вячеслав (@tango_x22x) 10 Фев 2019 в 12:35 PST

And so the region's winter landscape is transformed by this meteorological curiosity.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2019/02/13/triple-sunrise-dazzles-northern-russia-a64480>