

Russian Sailors Jailed in Greece for 400 Years for Trafficking Migrants – Reports

February 21, 2020

Activists say that Russian sailors take on jobs that they later discover to involve human trafficking out of financial hardship or a need to provide for sick relatives. Valery Matystin / TASS

Two Russian sailors have been sentenced to a combined 395 years in prison in Greece for trafficking migrants, the RBC news website reported Friday.

The sailors claim that they were initially hired to tow yachts and then received threats when they objected to trafficking people, human rights activist Ivan Melnikov told RBC. Interfax identified them as Alexander Illarionov and Andrei Zhuravlyov.

Related article: Syrian Refugees in Russia Trapped in Legal Limbo

A Greek court found the two Russian sailors guilty of organizing illegal migration, said Melnikov, the vice president of the International Human Rights Defense Committee's Russian branch.

The sailors were detained in November 2019 after hitting a storm and making a mayday call. They are among 14 Russian sailors detained in Greece that month, according to Interfax.

Two other Russian sailors have also been jailed for 395 years on trafficking charges in Greece, Interfax reported without specifying their names or when the verdict was handed down. A Nov. 14 report identified these two other sailors by their last names Malenkov and Belenko.

Melnikov told RBC that Russian sailors take on jobs that they later discover to involve human trafficking out of financial hardship or a need to provide for sick relatives.

Russia's Foreign Ministry estimated in November that Greece was holding 24 Russian sailors in custody. It added that Italy, another migrant trafficking destination, held 23 Russian sailors.

More than a million migrants and refugees fled conflict and poverty in the Middle East and Africa at the height of what was labeled Europe's refugee crisis in 2015. Their numbers fell significantly after Turkey, the main launching point, reached a deal with the European Union to stem the flow of people.

In August 2019, more than a dozen migrant boats landed in Greece in the first mass arrival of migrants from Turkey in three years.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2020/02/21/russian-sailors-jailed-in-greece-for-400-years-for-traffic king-migrants-reports-a69390>