

Pushkin House Announces 2020 Book Prize Short List

Six titles that are all required reading for Russia watchers

By Michele A. Berdy

April 29, 2020

Pushkin House Book Prize Short List

On Tuesday Pushkin House in London announced its short list of nominations for the 2020 Pushkin House Russian Book Prize.

The prize has been awarded annually since 2013 to the best book for the general reader about Russia or the Russian-speaking world published in English in the previous calendar year. The books may be translated into English from other languages.

This year the jury narrowed their choice down to the following six books:

- “Stalin’s Scribe: The Life of Mikhail Sholokhov” by Brian Boeck (Pegasus), the first biography of the Nobel Prize winner and controversial author of “Quiet Don.”

- “Manual for Survival: A Chernobyl Guide to the Future” by Kate Brown (W. Norton), a study of the devastating effects of the 1986 nuclear disaster and its lessons for decades of weapons testing and other nuclear accidents.
- “Floating Coast: And Environmental History of the Bering Strait” by Bathsheba Demuth (W. Norton), an exploration of the meeting of humans, nature and ideologies in the arctic.
- “An Impeccable Spy: Richard Sorge, Stalin’s Master Agent” by Owen Matthews (Bloomsbury), the story of the man whose intelligence about German and Japanese military plans played a crucial role in the ultimate Allied victory.
- “The Return of the Russian Leviathan” by Sergei Medvedev, translated by Stephen Dalziel (Wiley), a study of the sources of Russian behavior in foreign policy.
- “The Thing of Darkness: Eisenstein’s Ivan the Terrible in Stalin’s Russia,” by Joan Neuberger (Cornell University Press), the story of how Eisenstein conceived and made this epic film and how it was received at the time.

The jury is chaired by Serhii Plokyh, professor of Ukrainian history at Harvard University and two-time winner of the Pushkin House Book Prize. The other members of the jury are Celestine Bohlen, a former Moscow correspondent who teaches journalism at Science Po in Paris and is a contributor to The New York Times; Julia Safronova, associate professor and chair of the Department of History at the European University in St. Petersburg; and Richard Wright, visiting research fellow at King’s College London, former EU ambassador to Russia and director of the UN Agency for Palestine refugees.

Serhii Plokyh said that the books short-listed for the prize are all exceptionally good, and will make the task of choosing the best exceedingly difficult. The books, he said, “combine scholarly rigor with engaging writing style, raise important questions and bring to the reader numerous and often unexpected insights into the history, culture and politics that matter today the most.”

This year the prize has been doubled to £10,000 “in reflection of the increasing importance of showcasing, rewarding and encouraging original, insightful and well-written books on Russia and encouraging public understanding and intelligent debate about the country and its culture.” The prize is funded by Douglas Smith, his wife Stephanie, and Marc Polonsky, trustee of The Polonsky Foundation.

The prize will be awarded at a ceremony in the fall. This year events and discussion of the nominated books will move online, and as part of this Pushkin House has created a reading group on Facebook where the public are invited to join the authors and judges to take part in discussions about each book.

The Pushkin House was founded in 1954 as an independent, non-political venue for the support of Russian culture. It is a UK registered charity that conducts a rich program of events on Russian literature, art, music, history and society.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2020/04/29/pushkin-house-announces-2020-book-prize-short-list-a-70135>