A Russian military court will hear the “terrorism” case against theater director Yevgenia Berkovich and playwright Svetlana Petrychuk over their award-winning play about Russian women who fall in love with Islamist militants, prosecutors said Friday.

Berkovich and Petrychuk were arrested in May 2023 on the accusation of “justifying terrorism” with their play “Finist the Brave Falcon.” Berkovich and Petrychuk, who deny their guilt, are scheduled to remain in pre-trial detention until at least May 4.

The Moscow Prosecutor’s Office announced in a statement that it had approved the indictment against Berkovich and Petrychuk, who face up to seven years in prison if convicted.

It said it handed the case to Moscow's Second Western Military Garrison Court without specifying when it was scheduled to hold hearings.

“According to investigators, Petriyuchuk drafted the script of the theatrical play ‘Finist the Brave Falcon,’ which psychological and linguistic expertise found to contain signs of justification and propaganda or terrorist activities,” the prosecutors said.

“Then, Berkovich and Petriyuchuk jointly staged the play, which was publicly demonstrated at various festivals, in theater organizations and on the internet,” the law enforcement body added.

This week, Russia’s state financial watchdog Rosfinmonitoring added Berkovich and Petriyuchuk to its list of “terrorists and extremists,” allowing authorities to freeze their bank accounts without a court order.
